

Exchanging Happy Ramadan Wishes

Sheikh Ahmad Kutty, a senior lecturer and Islamic scholar at the Islamic Institute of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, stated,

Every Muslim should be commended you for their desire to express good will/spirit toward other Muslim colleagues and friends. It is becoming of people of all religions to develop cordial relations; that would go a long way in making our global village a better place for all of the human family.

now coming specifically to this matter, Muslims may do well to wish other Muslim colleagues or friends a “blessed Ramadan.” For Muslims, Ramadan is a time of spiritual renewal, so there is nothing better than wishing them a spiritually rewarding month. Let me, on my part, wish you spiritually rewarding times.
